Stand the Southwestern Railroad Strikers.

They Stop All Attempts to Run Trains in the Face of the Officers.

The Situation Rather Strained, With but Little Hope of a Settlement.

NO PREDICTIONS

As to How or When the Strike Will End.

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL. ST. LOUIS, March 23.—No one ventures the prediction as to how or when the strike upon the Gould southwest system will end. At last reports the strikers have called on the merchants of this city to assist in bringing about an arbitration.

FAILED TO GO OUT.

SEDALIA, Mo. March 23.—A train was started out yesterday afternoon. The engineer, fireman and brakemen each received a note before starting, requesting them for the sake of humanity not to go out. When they had gone a short distance a torpedo exploded under the engine. Soon after the train stopped and was backed into the yards. The man who gave the note to the trainmen was arrested.

ONE TRAIN OUT.

KANSAS CITY, Mo. March 23.—A stock train of twenty-eight cars came in over the Atchison and Topeka road this morning. The stock was unloaded without molestation.

A TRAIN STOPPED.

ST. LOUIS, Mo. March 23.—This morning the Missouri Pacific railroad officials attempted to start a freight train, but, as usual, without success. The train was uncoupled, the switches thrown and a large force of police and private detectives were unable to guard the train. No arrests made.

THE STRIKERS WIN.

PITTSBURG, March 23.—The strike of 4,000 workmen at the National Tube works, of McKeesport, Pa., has ended satisfactorily to the strikers.

A NEW ORDER.

BOSTON, March 23.—A new secret order resembling the Knights of Labor, to be called the Knights of Industry, is in the course of formation. The order will embrace hand and brain workers. Strikes will be discouraged and arbitration advocated.

KILLED ENGINES.

PALESTINE, Tex. March 23.—The striking Knights of Labor invaded the Texas and Pacific railroad yards this morning and disabled two passenger engines.

REJECTED.

The Knights of Labor at St. Louis flatly refused to accept the offer made by H. M. Hoxie for the Missouri Pacific road. The union switchmen in every yard in Kansas City quit work at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, although an advance in wages was recently granted them.

LABOR NOTES.

In the first annual report of the bureau of labor, Commissioner Wright says that last year 1,000,000 men on the average were idle in this country. He thinks the effects of the depression are wearing away, and all the indications are that prosperity is slowly and gradually, but safely returning.

The Knights of Labor of Galveston having failed heretofore in their efforts to secure the assistance of merchants there in boycotting the Malloy line have now turned their attention to boycotting the merchants throughout Texas.

They Called Again.

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL. PHILADELPHIA, March 23.—On Sunday night thieves entered the store of Jones & Fisher and stole $1,500 worth of silk. Last night they went back again and carried off silks valued at $2,000.

Killed by a Falling Rock.

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL. DETROIT, March 22.—The Evening Journal's happening special says that Charles Sieberdall and Andrew Hoesby, employees of the Cleveland Iron Mining company were instantly killed by the fall of a heavy rock in the company's mine this morning. Both leave families.

Fighting at Brussels.

By Cable to THE SENTINEL. BRUSSELS, March 23.—The conflicts between the striking miners and troops continue. Many more on both sides have been wounded.

Diseased cattle to the number of 106, valued at $16,000, were killed last week at and around Cynthiana, Ky. It is now believed that pleuro-pneumonia does not exist in the state.

A STORY OF SUCCESS.

Life and Fortunes of Potter Palmer, Proprietor of the Famous Palmer House

(Special Correspondence.)

CHICAGO, March 23.—Probably not one in a thousand of the multitude of travelers who enter the great portals of Chicago's greatest hotel is able to recognize the elderly, but erect and active, man who occasionally hurries by—a busy man, with his hands full of papers, a high hat, none too new or glossy, worn well back upon his head, clothes severely plain, small but kindly eyes, and a pinched mouth whose hard lines are ever ready to break into a smile of good nature. This man is Potter Palmer, builder and landlord of the hotel which is by many pronounced the greatest in the world. The story of his life is a story of a great fortune twice won. Like most of the self-made men of Chicago, Potter Palmer was in youth a farmer's boy. He was born nearly sixty years ago in Albany county, N. Y. His parents were Quakers, and the lad was raised in habits of frugality and industry. At 18 he became clerk in the store of Platt Adams, which stood in the village of Durham, Greene county, to the shadow of the Catskills. Shortly afterward he started a dry goods store of his own at Oneida, and a year later removed to Lockport. He was successful from the beginning, and though Lockport was a thriving town, the young Quaker soon found his ambition superior to his opportunity. He cast about for a more promising location, and while upon a prospecting tour spent one day in Chicago. This was then a straggling town of 40,000 people, but the keen eye of the dry goods merchant perceived the signs of coming greatness, and that one day decided him. He at once sold his store in Lockport and came to Chicago with a capital of less than $6,000. That was in 1852, and the first year his sales were $73,000. He was almost an ideal merchant, the old school; was first to arrive at his store in the morning, the last to leave at night, careful alike of his credit and that of his customers, watchful of the pennies and polite to the ladies. With all the details of his Quaker prudence he was bold when boldness was required, and this quality of courageous action, following the resolve born of keen perception, was ultimately found to be the secret of his great success. The war was his opportunity, and he was not slow in improving it. He believed that values were soon to become greatly inflated, and, risking his fortune upon the correctness of his judgment, he filled all the warehouses he could rent with cotton and woolen goods, purchased immediately after Sumter was fired upon. His courage was amply rewarded. In four years he made $2,500,000, and when, in 1865, he concluded to retire from business, he held more than $2,500,000 in government bonds. Satisfied with what he had, he abandoned his position as the merchant prince of interior America. In thirteen years the sales of his house, now wholesale as well as retail, had grown from $73,000 to $7,000,000 a year, making it the largest dry goods establishment, with two exceptions, on this continent.

A bachelor of 40, the possessor of good health and $5,000,000 or $4,000,000, Mr. Palmer retired to what he hoped would be a life of ease. At Saratoga he soon acquired reputation as a dashing man of the world. No turnout was finer than his, no man more liberal with money than he, no flirt more desperate than the Quaker dry goods prince from the wild west. During one gay season he was the lion of the Springs, and at him were shied innumerable feminine caps. Quaker reticence is a thing of the past; late dinners, of dashing rides behind four-in-hands, accompanied by one or more beauties of the hour, of rivulets of champagne and gold galore. Doubtless some of them have come down to us by evolution out of a more protoplasmic sort of truth, but, be that as it may, Chicago society was startled when it heard, in 1870, that the belle of the town, the daughter of a then most prominent and wealthy citizen, H. H. House, was to wed the late Potter Palmer. With all his millions, "they" of society declared the high-priced beauty was "throwing herself away" in marrying a man twice her age. "They," however, were far once mistaken, for no more happy and devoted, and apparently well-matched couple can be found in Chicago to this day.

But Palmer did not devote himself entirely to pleasure. At the close of the war Chicago had no retail street of pretensions. State street, save two blocks, was a narrow lane, between rows of shanties. Single-handed and alone, Potter Palmer set out to make this alley the principal thoroughfare of the growing city. He moved with elaborate taste his quarters of a mile of frontage; he bought old buildings, moved them back so as to make the street 100 feet wide, or built new ones on the new line. He coaxed some property holders and frightened others; and at last, after four years of work and expenditure, he succeeded in having State street made 100 feet wide. Almost as if by magic the new street became metropolitan in appearance. Palmer himself erected a dozen fine buildings, including the first Palmer house, and a store building, whose marble front alone cost more than $100,000, and which was, upon its completion, the finest building in the world devoted to trade. In October, 1871, the new Palmer house was begun, and State street was then, what it has since remained, the leading thoroughfare of Chicago.

To Potter Palmer the great fire came as a crushing calamity. Ninety-five of his buildings were destroyed. A rent roll of $192,000 a year was reduced to nothing. His total loss of income was $250,000, and the income remaining was not sufficient by $15,000 to pay the taxes alone. The prospect was so dreary that for a day Palmer hesitated. Only a year married, and about beginning a series of travels, his dreams of ease and bliss were thus suddenly dispelled. He was tempted to withdraw the remnant of his fortune and leave to others the work of rebuilding the city. While thus hesitating he went to his wife, whose sister is Mrs. Fred Grant. To her he described his perplexity. "What," he asked, "shall we do?" "Mr. Palmer," replied the wife, "it is the duty of every Chicagoan to stay here and devote his fortune and his energies to rebuilding this stricken city."

This decision gave to Chicago her palace hotel and a score of palatial business blocks. From that moment Potter Palmer's energies were devoted to the work of reconstruction. Upon the ruins of a dozen buildings, an army of workmen were soon busy clearing away rubbish. Train loads of building material came rushing in to his order. Foundations were renewed or rebuilt. For the first time in this country artificial lights were used that work on the new Palmer house might go on by night as well as by day. Building after building rose from the ashes. No man contributed so much to the resurrection and new life of Chicago as Potter Palmer.

But his whole fortune was risked upon the outcome. It is only half a secret that at one time it was a question if he could escape at least temporary insolvency. He had little or no income. His fortune was invested in real estate. Insurance returns were meager, taxes enormous. His building operations required immense outlays. The Palmer house alone swallowed $2,500,000 in building and furnishing before it was opened to guests. But he never faltered. Some real estate was sold, other mortgaged. Rates of interest were high, and following all, came the panic of 1873. Yet he pulled through, and soon found that his very boldness had saved much of his fortune. For whereas a more timid man would have kept nearer the shore in the storm and sold more readily, Palmer held to as much as possible and was subsequently profited by the amazing increase in the value of Chicago business property. Potter Palmer is to-day a very wealthy man, and his rent roll is the largest in the city. It fills twenty pages, and much of it represents stores and other business buildings in the heart of the city. Thus, notwithstanding the real estate which he was compelled to sacrifice during his extremity is now worth $1,000,000 more than he received for it, Potter Palmer has expended more money in buildings than any other Chicagoan. Four and a half million dollars represent his investments in this direction in this city. These, as well as the other figures given in this letter, may be relied upon, as I have them from Mr. Palmer's own lips.

That Potter Palmer's life story is one of success may be gathered from the foregoing, as well as from the fact that the Quaker dry goods dealer has been a successful landlord. Not every dry goods man succeeds as a hotel keeper. The Palmer house was built to rent, and the great success was his in coming upon its completion that he determined to manage it himself. For twelve years he has devoted to the management of this house almost daily attention. Nothing escapes his eye. He is thoroughly familiar with all the details of his innumerable departments, keeping almost as close watch upon the vast caravanary, with its 850 rooms and 600 employees, as the most zealous country landlord is able to give his humble inn. His hobby is repairs. Every day, and at most hours of every day, he may be found giving directions to mechanics—plumbers, carpenters, decorators, painters—never trusting such work to subordinates. His weak point is inability to remember faces. About two years ago he discharged his engineer for incompetency, after finding something amiss in the engine room. A few hours afterward a neatly dressed man accosted him:

"Hear you want to hire an engineer?"

"Yes. Have you got good recommendations?"

The man had, and he was hired at a salary of $10 a month more than the old engineer was paid. He proved a good man, too, and for several days everything went along nicely. Then Palmer made a strange discovery. The new engineer was the old one, whom the landlord had not recognized in his store clothes. The man is still in charge of the engine, and at the advanced salary, too.

Potter Palmer lives in the finest house in Chicago. It is a castle, and stands on the shore of Lake Michigan, near Lincoln park.

In some respects it is the finest residence in America. The great gothic tower suggests a castle of England. The hall is baronial, with carved oak staircases and furnishings. Slender gothic pillars support the gallery, for the hall's vaulted roof reaches the height of the house, and draped across these pillars are the most perfect examples of Gobelin tapestries, rich and rare. The floor is composed of a most wonderful piece of mosaic in marble. An Indian rug of unique pattern, bearskin rug, and the skin of an enormous Bengal tiger, add warmth of color to the scene. A grand old oaken table carved in Italy centuries ago, Powers' "Medea" suits of armor, other statues and a host of the owner of the house are interesting objects in this apartment.

The whole house is in keeping with this superb hall. Spanish artists have decorated the grand library, where the bookcases are of carved oak, and where life-sized oaken figures from a chapel near Antwerp, and believed to have been made by the same master who fashioned the famous carvings in Antwerp cathedral, may be found upon the mantel. There is an Indian room, unique and dazzlingly oriental, a Moorish room fitting Irving's description of the Alhambra, a Japanese boudoir, a piano made to order by the mahogany tables, a great conservatory, Moorish lamps—everything rich and artistic which good taste could desire or money procure. The mistress of this palace is still young and beautiful, popular in society, devoted to her Quaker husband, and, as may be imagined, as happy as the day is long.

WORK!

Mapped out for Congress This Week.

Both Houses do Active and Important Work To-day—Mrs. Hancock Pensioned.

New Nominations Made To-day and the Prospects of Action on the Old Ones.

HOW CONGRESS STANDS.

The Edmunds Bill Likely to Come to a Head.

By Telegraph to THE SENTINEL.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The Edmunds resolutions are likely to be brought to a final vote in the senate the present week. The pending question is on the Van Wyck amendment to consider the nominations to which the resolutions relate in open session. It is possible, however, that the amendment may be withdrawn, the course having been suggested by senators who are heartily in favor of the principle it embodies but do not think it best to now mix the matter with the issues raised by the resolution or dispose of it as a party question. An effort will be made, and will probably succeed, to get up the Washington territory bill as soon as the pending resolutions are out of the way. The unfinished business of yesterday's morning hour was Logan's bill to increase the efficiency of the army to 30,000 enlisted men. Logan and Hale had a sharp talk on this measure and it went over to give room to the Edmunds bill discussion by Mr. Colquhoun.

HOUSE.

In the house yesterday the bill to grant a $2,000 pension to the widow of General Hancock, was passed. The Indian appropriation bill, which was extensively discussed last week, is likely to be passed to-day or to-morrow. The postoffice appropriation bill will then have the right of way, and it is expected to run through the week. It is understood that the consideration of this measure will be enlivened by a political debate concerning the postmaster general's policy in regard to last year's appropriations for carrying the ocean mails. The business for the morning hour this week will come from the committee on war claims, district of Columbia, civil service reform and American shipping, naval affairs, or so many of them as may be touched under the call. The measures of general interest that may thus be brought up for action are the bill relating to pilotage and the bill to increase the navy. Saturday will be devoted to a continuation of the silver discussion.

GENERAL AND PERSONAL.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The belief is entertained that few, if any, removals will be made in the postal service until after congress adjourns, when republicans will be weeded out rapidly.

The Trumbull International Telephone company announces that they will, immediately upon the abandonment of Indiana by the Bell Telephone company, enter upon the field and give even a better service for $3 per month.

PROCEEDINGS TO-DAY.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The chair laid before the senate a number of house bills, among them was a bill granting a pension of $2,000 a year to the widow of General Hancock. On motion of Blair, that bill was at once passed, Blair stating it had been this morning considered by the pension committee of the senate.

Mr. Beck withdrew the motion heretofore made by him to reconsider the vote by which the senate agreed to the house joint resolution to provide flowers for the new pension building.

The chair laid before the senate Mr. Logan's bill to promote the efficiency of the army, and Manderson spoke in favor of the section increasing the force to 30,000 enlisted men.

The senate committee on finance to-day decided to report favorably upon the nomination of several internal revenue collectors in respect to whose predecessor Secretary Manning says no charges reflecting upon their official or moral character are pending.

The president sent the following nominations to the senate to-day: James W. Romeyn, of Detroit, consul to Valparaiso. Postmasters: Martin's Ferry, Ohio, James Y. Patterson; Edinburgh, Ind., E. K. Hasford.

The senate committee on the District of Columbia has decided by a tie vote to report adversely the nomination of J. C.

Matthews (colored), to be recorder of deeds for the district of Columbia.

The house passed the Fourth of July claims bill. The amount involved is $238,200.

Mr. Forney reported a bill for the special and uniform instruction of state militia. On the house calendar.

Mr. Doolittle reported back the bill to extend the system for the immediate delivery of letters. On the house calendar.

The house went into committee of the whole, Mr. McMillan in the chair, on the Indian appropriation bill.

CIVIL-SERVICE REFORM.

Civil-service reform comes hard, because the evils against which it is aimed have been long entrenched in the body politic and can only be removed by heroic treatment. Because an abuse is of long standing, however, is no reason why it should be tolerated, and the assertion of such a principle is without rhyme or reason. Diseases which afflict the human body are not looked upon as blessings because long endured, nor should those which afflict the state be considered so. Everything which is inconsistent with the most perfect working of the body and government must be gotten rid of. Such, at least, is the belief of Mr. W. D. Murphy, of No. 310 Xander street, Indianapolis, who has recently been cured of rheumatism of twenty-five years' standing by that great remedy, Athlophoros. Age gave the disease no charm in his eyes, and he swept it away at the first opportunity. He himself tells all about the matter in this way:

"My rheumatism dates way back about twenty-five years. I first contracted it in the war, in which I served four years and six months. After returning home from service the disease seemed to assume a periodical form. I would have at least two severe attacks every year, but even between these attacks I would suffer all the time. These attacks prevented me from getting about, and many times I could not walk or get out of bed. They would catch me in the legs so that after standing while I would feel suddenly weak and in danger of falling."

"Was it during one of these attacks that you used Athlophoros?" Mr. Murphy was asked.

"Yes; that's the time and that's when it did its work. I saw it advertised and sent to B. Behn, the druggist on Columbia avenue, for a bottle. It was in the afternoon I took the first dose and then at night I took another. I slept soundly that night. The next morning when I awoke I had no pain. I took a few doses more, only using about two-thirds of a bottle altogether and my rheumatism was all gone. That is over a year ago and I have only felt a little twinge of the pain since, but nothing to speak of."

"Do you know of any others who have used Athlophoros?"

"Yes. I have recommended it to many different persons, and have seen it in great use in the medicine that in several instances I have bought bottles of it and given them to people, saying at the time that if it did not do its work they need not pay for it; but there is not a single case in which I did not have my money within a week. There is Mrs. Wright, an aged lady of seventy, living a few miles from here, who, after suffering from rheumatic pains for fifteen years, was entirely rid of all pain by three or four bottles of Athlophoros. I recommended another lady, who was supposed to be suffering from dyspepsia, but who in reality had neuralgia of the stomach, to try Athlophoros, and it soon cured her. My neighbor, who had a severe attack of neuralgia, his face being swollen out of all shape, was cured by a few doses. My confidence in Athlophoros is very strong, and I believe that if any one suffering with rheumatism or neuralgia will take it right it will cure ninety-nine cases out of a hundred. It is worth $100 a bottle to every sufferer from rheumatism."

If you cannot get Athlophoros of your druggist, we will send it express paid, on receipt of regular price—one dollar per bottle. We prefer that you buy it from our druggist, but if he hasn't it, do not be persuaded to try something else, but order it sent from us. Write to J. C. Athlophoros Co., 112 West Street, New York.

ALL THAT SCIENCE AND SKILL could do to make Benson's Caprine Plasters the best porous plaster, and also the best general external remedy in the world, has been done. Whenever it is possible to improve them it is done. Benson's plasters are not made to impose upon the credulous, but to cure disease. Their eminent success has procured them the voluntary endorsement of 5000 physicians, pharmacists and druggists throughout the country, and the outspoken preference of the intelligent public. They are prompt, powerful, cleanly and certain. They cure where no others will even relieve. Refuse imitations styled "Caplin," "Capicum," or "Capicin," plasters. Reputable druggists only. The "Three Seals" mark on the genuine and the word "Capicin" cut in the center of the plaster.

TUESDAY, MARCH 23, 1886.

THOMAS SEXTON, M. P. for Tyrone, the scholarly orator of the Irish party, is only thirty-nine years of age. He was born at Waterford, Ireland.

The suit involving the validity of the Bell telephone patents will be taken to Columbus, Ohio, for hearing. Hon. Allen G. Thurman and Hon. Joseph E. McDonald will be on opposing sides with other eminent lawyers.

ALREADY the claim set up for the Vanderbilt mansion of being the most elegant in the world is disputed. It is declared that the chateau of Penna, built by the retired king of Portugal for his morganatic wife, Comtesse Edia, cannot be rivaled. It cost millions, and Labouche says that "one would fancy Gustave Dore planned it for the mistress of his soul."

JUSTICE FIELD, of the Supreme Court, takes deep interest in the electrical inventions of Mr. Edison. "I would not," he is reported as saying, "be surprised any day to hear that he had discovered the secret that the alchemists searched for so long, and invented some method of keeping the vital spark alive forever. The vital spark is nothing but electricity after all."

The new headquarters of the Salvation Army, now about completed in Toronto, has a frontage of 100 feet and a depth of 100. The auditorium will seat 2,500 persons, and there are all the conveniences of the modern church. This "Salvation Temple," as it is called, cost $40,000, which has been raised by banquets, special subscriptions, collections, and the like.

A SUNBURY, Pennsylvania, girl got out a license to marry one man, and the next day applied to the court clerk for another permit to marry a different party. It then transpired that she had two admirers, and it was the young woman's intention to hold the two certificates in terror and finally marry the one who would offer the greatest financial inducements. She kept her plan hidden from the lovers.

SAMUEL J. PIPER and Albert G. Herndon were life prisoners in the Albany Penitentiary for robbing a mail coach in Texas. When the recent epidemic of typhus fever broke out in the jail they volunteered as nurses, and both rendered valuable services until Piper himself was taken ill. He is just recovering. Their heroic conduct induced Albany officials to ask for their pardon, and it has been granted.

The population of London now exceeds every other city, ancient or modern, in the world. New York and all its adjacent cities combined are not equal to two-thirds of it. Scotland, Switzerland, and the Australian colonies each contain fewer souls, while Norway, Servia, Greece and Denmark have scarcely half so many. Yet, at the beginning of the present century, the population of all London did not reach one million.

In one of his letters to his sister, just published, Benjamin Disraeli wrote, among a party at Bulwer's: "I was introduced, by particular desire," to Mrs. Wyndham Lewis, a pretty little woman, a flirt, and a rattle; indeed, gifted with a volubility I should think unequalled, and of which I can convey no idea. She told me she liked silent, melancholy men." I answered that I had no doubt of it." And yet in a few years Mrs. Lewis and Mr. Disraeli "were married and lived happily ever after," as the story books say.

A RECENTLY-MARRIED electrician was living near Sacramento, Cal., has devised a scheme for protecting his wife from the annoyance of traps. The vagrants invariably sought the kitchen via a rear stairway, so the electrician detached the four bottom steps from the others and attached a powerful battery to them. A wire from the battery ran into the kitchen, and when a tramp is seen approaching all that is necessary is to touch a spring at the proper moment, and the astonished seeker after provender is thrown nearly over the back fence.

A WAGON road and railroad track ran side by side for a quarter of a mile near Adairsville, Georgia, and then the road crosses the track. Walter Curtis' horse took fright at an express train there the other day and ran away. The engineer put on steam and tried to beat the horse to the crossing, but the horse got there first, just in time to be knocked sixty feet, by actual measurement, and instantly killed. Curtis was found thirty-five feet from the point of collision. A three-inch iron ring which he had in his pocket was bent almost double, but his gold watch was going all right in his vest pocket, while the chain was found in a field.

It is reported in court circles at St. Petersburg that a formal separation will shortly take place between the Grand Duke and the Grand Duchess Serge, whose eighteen months' married life has been profligate in squabbles and misunderstandings. They would have been separated nearly a year ago if the Emperor and Empress had not then interfered to avert the scandal. The Grand Duchess is the second daughter of the Grand Duke of Hesse, and the Queen will be exceedingly wroth at this termination of her granddaughter's married life. The Princess Elizabeth of Hesse was so sick of the sordid dog-hole economies of Darmstadt that she resolved to marry a wealthy husband, and she refused two highly eligible German princes only because of the inadequacy of their means. One of them has since married the richest royal heiress in Europe.

THREE REASONS
Why every one needs, and should take Hood's Sarsaparilla in the spring:— 1st: Because the system is now in its greatest need. Hood's Sarsaparilla gives strength.
2d: Because the blood is sluggish and impure. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies.
3d: Because, from the above facts, Hood's Sarsaparilla will do a great amount of good now more than any other time. Take it now.

DR. A. C. HOXIE'S CERTAIN CROUP CURE.
—This preparation, a private and original preparation, extensively used in an unlimited practice for many years, with perfect success by the late A. C. Hoxie, M. D., of Buffalo, N. Y. Having thoroughly tested and tried this remedy he had no hesitation in pronouncing it positive, swift and sure to cure Croup in its most aggravated form, when administered promptly and according to directions. Its powerful and direct effect upon the diseased mucous membrane, render it particularly invaluable to those living at a distance from a physician—as it is seldom necessary to call in professional aid, if the "Certain Croup Cure" is near at hand. While powerful and effective, it contains no opium in any form, nor any drug which can have a deleterious or injurious effect upon the system. The most delicate infant may take it, as directed, with perfect safety. Price $1.00. For sale by all first-class druggists, wholesale and retail. Dec 22-24-26-28

I think Ely's Cream Balm is the best remedy for catarrh I ever saw. I never took anything that relieved me so quickly and I have not felt so well for a long time. I used to be troubled with severe headaches two or three times a week, but since using the balm have only had one and that was very light compared with the former ones.—A. J. Aleorn, agent U. P. Ry. Co., Eaton, Co.
I find Ely's Cream Balm good for catarrh of long standing.—M. N. Laseley, 1824 West Chestnut St., Louisville.

THE WEATHER.

The Indications To-day and How The Report is Collected.

The indications for the lower lake region, as reported by the weather bureau at Washington to THE SENTINEL, are as follows: Fair clearing weather, stationary, followed by cloudy, rising temperature.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—From this date until the crops are all in there is one department of our government whose work is looked to daily with a great deal of interest. It is the weather bureau. On the accuracy of its predictions depends often the safety of much valuable property.

THE CHIEF SIGNAL OFFICE.

The building occupied by the work of this bureau is shown in the illustration. Here at a little desk sits the officer who is to prognosticate the weather for the whole country, and his method of doing it is briefly as follows: He is in telegraphic communication with the members of the signal corps of the army. These men are stationed at various posts over the whole country from Halifax to San Diego, and from Fort Barry to Key West. Observations of the weather are taken three times a day, at intervals of eight hours. Each observation being taken all over the country at precisely the same moment of Washington time, and are immediately recorded. The facts thus obtained are charted upon a map of the United States. That is, lines are drawn over the places reporting equal temperature. Other lines are drawn over the stations or the map reporting like barometric pressure. These last lines are termed "isobars," and the lines of equal temperature "isotherms." From a careful study of this map of the United States, with the freshly drawn "isobars" and "isotherms," the officer in charge is enabled to determine the probable movements of the storms, winds, cold waves, etc., and makes his prediction for the different sections. These predictions are immediately telegraphed over the whole country, and published in the press and through bulletins, and by the recently adopted system of signals.

The official head of the signal service is Gen. W. B. Hazen, who succeeded "Old Probabilities" Gen. Myer, in 1880. He superintends the instruction of officers and men in signal duties, at Fort Whipple, just across the Potomac, on Arlington heights. His headquarters are here, though, and he has for assistants Capt. Jones, and First Lieut. Dunwoody, Wheeler, of Arctic fame, and Woodruff, and six second lieutenants, besides several clerks. The bureau was created in 1870, but did not commence operations on an extended scale until 1874. It controls and operates several thousand miles of telegraph. The system of gathering reports of the weather, and from them formulating weather warnings, is likely to be adopted eventually over the whole globe.

Just now a storm is approaching the weather bureau in the shape of a congressional investigation which may test its stability. It has weathered other storms before this, though this one may develop into a cyclone and leave it short of much of its present importance. After the peculations of Capt. Howgate it was said the signal service would have to go down under the gale which then arose; but it was not budged from its moorings, and Howgate went into some safe harbor, where he has been sheltered since.

Doctor's Bills.

Any person whose blood and liver is good condition is all right even in the midst of epidemics. This can be noticed in the life of every one. If all would avail themselves of the advantage of restoring and maintaining the health of the body there would be fewer doctor's bills, and much less sorrow. The one thing useful and the one recommended above all others is found in Simmons' Liver Regulator. The testimonials are counted by the thousands and its merits are undoubted.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup should always be used when children are cutting teeth. It relieves the little sufferers at once; it produces natural, quiet sleep by relieving the child from pain, and the little cherub awakes as "bright as a button." It is very pleasant to taste. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, relieves wind, regulates the bowels, and is the best known remedy for diarrhoea, whether arising from teething or other causes. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

JIMMY HOWARD'S CONFESSION.

A Little Coward—The Captain's Story—Contentment—Gone A-Weeding, Etc., Etc.

Gone A-Weeding.

Says Ben to Hess,
"Tis time, I guess,
To weed our garden beds."
Ben jumps to see
With rake and hoe,
And big hats on their heads.

They work away,
With chatter gay,
Through all the bright afternoon.
Ben jumps to see
How Bessie wees
Grows warm and tired so soon.

All trim and neat
Beneath their feet
Now lies the little nook;
And, very proud,
They call aloud
For nurse to come and look.

"Oh, dear!" she cries,
With laughing eyes,
"What gardeners gay are you!
They've left the weeds,
That no one needs,
And dug up all the flowers!"

—Babyland.

Contentment.

Contentment is being satisfied with what we have, not with what we are. It refers to material things and not to mental acquisitions nor spiritual attainments. It is more than making the best of everything. It is believing without questioning that God's will and God's ways are best for us. It is being sure that, whatever comes, "All things work together for good." The contented Christian may be artistic, may have a genuine love of the beautiful, may enjoy dainty furnishings, but if his home be poor and plain he will be just as happy there as anywhere if God reigns within and he lives only to do His will.

A poor widow who had no clothes to cover her little boy when sleeping, used boards for blankets, trying to shelter him from the snow which blew through the cracks of their miserable hovel. One night he said to her, smiling, "Mother, what do poor folks do these cold nights, who have no boards to put over their children?" A great king, walking out one morning, met a lad at the stable-door, and asked him, "Well, my boy, what do they pay you here for your work?"

"Nothing," replied the lad, "except my food and clothes."

"Be content," said the king; "I have no more."—The Illustrator.

A Little Coward.

Jimmy Howard was 12 years old, and away from home for the first time in his life. His mother was an invalid, and his parents had sent him to boarding-school. He had expected it would be grand fun, and he had enjoyed his first day very much, but it was ended, and here he was in his room with four other boys, and he had promised his mother to read a few verses in his Testament, and pray every night.

"I can't," he said to himself, "I know these fellows never pray; see how full of fun they are."

"But you promised," conscience whispered.

"Mother never half knew how hard it would be, or she would never have asked me. Why, I shouldn't wonder if they threw their shoes at me. There wouldn't be any comfort praying that way. I'll just jump into bed and say my prayers there, and I'll read my Testament to-morrow when they are not looking."

So he quieted the voice of conscience and slipped into bed, pulled the clothing over his face to shut out the clatter, and tried to pray. But he was not happy and the words would not come. Presently it grew quiet, and he heard one of the boys say, "John, it's your turn to read to-night."

"So 'tis," was the answer.

And then he listened as John read aloud the fifth chapter of Ephesians. "This is my verse, boys," John said, as he finished. "Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess; but be filled with the spirit."

"That one about 'redeeming the time' is mine," said one of the others.

"Seems to me that one about 'foolish talking and jesting' comes home to us pretty well. I never knew that was in the Bible, did you, John?"

"Yes, mother read it to me once, but it is an awful hard one to live up to."

"What is your verse?" he asked of a lazy-looking boy, who was lounging on the foot of his bed.

"I haven't any," he drawled out.

"Where's the new boy?" asked John. Then, seeing where he was: "I say, Jimmy Howard, ain't you ashamed of yourself to get into bed without saying your prayers?"

"Yes, I am, sure as you're alive," the boy said, rolling out. "I am a regular little coward; I thought you'd all laugh at me, and I couldn't stand it."

And as he dropped upon his knees with the others, he remembered a Sunday-school lesson of several months before, about the prophet Elijah under the juniper-tree, bemoaning the fact that he was the only one who did not worship Baal, when there were thousands in Israel who had not bowed the knee to that false God.

The next day Jimmy Howard wrote to his mother a full confession of his wrong, not forgetting to tell how he had been comforted, while begging for forgiveness, in the thought that the great prophet Elijah had at one time been just as weak and cowardly as he.

The Captain's Story.

"Say, Captain, do you want a boy?" The old Captain looked up, and fixed his keen blue eyes on the boy that stood before him.

"What do you want to go to sea for?" he asked.

"To have a good time," answered the boy, promptly.

"What's your name?" asked the Captain.

"Willie Harrison."

"Do your father and mother know you are going to sea?" asked the Captain.

The boy's face flushed. He hung his head, and did not answer the last question.

"I thought as much," said the Captain, reading his answer in the boy's face. "You look to me like a boy that was running away from home. Now, you have probably been reading books about sailors that have made you believe they have nothing but an easy time and lots of fun. These books have said nothing about hard work and storms. If you will take my advice, my boy, you will go right back home again, and not leave it again in this way. Wait till you are older and wiser before you decide on your calling for life. When I was a boy about your size I did the same thing. I ran away from home, and shipped on a vessel without telling my mother what I wanted to do. I left a note telling her that I would write when we reached a port. I thought it would be a grand thing to be a sailor, but I was soon undeceived. We had scarcely left port before I would have given anything in the world to get home again. I had plenty of hard work to do, with many a taste of the rope's end if I failed to please. Sick or well, I had to work, and even when I did my best the mate swore at me for a lazy lubber. I used to cry myself to sleep, many a night thinking of my home and the dear mother I ran away from. I knew what a foolish boy I had been but that did not help the matter."

"At last there came a terrible storm. The waves seemed to me to tower up like mountains, and they looked as if they would swallow us up. Our sails were torn in shreds and the masts were broken. 'We must take to the boats,' the Captain said, 'she is sinking fast.'"

The boats were hastily lowered, and then the men crowded into them as fast as they could, each one pushing forward as fast as possible, lest there should not be room for all.

"Give way!" shouted the Captain; and the men bent to their oars.

"Don't go without me!" I screamed, as I saw that they had deserted me, but my call was in vain. The roar of the storm drowned my voice, and the men were too intent on saving themselves to heed me.

"The vessel was very near shore when she was wrecked, and I thought perhaps the men might have intended to return for me, but as I saw the little boats tossing on the waves like empty shells, I feared that they would not be willing to face them again to save me. I was without a friend or helper save One."

"Very earnestly I prayed that God would spare my life and let me see my home again."

"I saw a wave approaching which looked as if it would surely engulf the vessel, and, clasping an empty hen-coop which was on deck, I awaited its coming. I felt it sweep me from the deck, and I clung to the coop with all my strength, knowing that it would keep me afloat at any rate."

"Two or three times I almost lost my hold, but at last my life-preserver was thrown upon the beach, and kind hands saved me from the water. God had answered my prayer and mercifully spared my life. When I was well enough I wrote to my mother, telling her of my escape and asking her forgiveness for leaving her. I did not receive an answer, and it was some time before I was able to get a passage home."

"When at last I reached my native place, I found the house empty and closed, and weeds growing everywhere in the once well-kept garden. My mother had died of a broken heart, when, as she supposed, I had perished with the wreck. My letter had been too late."

"Now, my boy, you have heard my story. Will you profit by it? Will you take my advice and go back to your mother?"

"Yes, sir," answered Willie.

The romance he had fancied in a sailor's life was offset by the sad story he had just heard, and he was sensible enough to profit by it and return to his home and his parents before it was too late.—Morning Star.

To-day is a king in disguise. To-day always looks mean to the thoughtless, in the face of an uniform experience, that all good and great and happy actions are made up precisely of these blank to-days.—Emerson.

I have seen a picture of Niagara in which a group of visitors in the foreground was so large that one could scarcely see the Falls. Some men are like photographers, who always take their pictures so. Whatever the scene may be, self is always in the front, larger than anything else which the picture has to show.—Rev. Isaac O. Rankin.

"Throw Physic to the Dogs"

When it is the old-fashioned blue mass, blue pill sort, and insist on using Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," a modern medical luxury, being small, sugar-coated granules, containing the active principles of certain roots and herbs, and which will be found to contain as much cathartic power as any of the old-fashioned, larger pills, without the latter's violent, drastic effects. The pellets operate thoroughly but harmlessly, establishing a permanently healthy action of the stomach and bowels, and as an anti-bilious remedy are unequalled.

Chancey E. Weirick, the little son of John Weirick, died last week in Milan township. He is greatly missed by the family and his little school mates.

Mrs. Sarah A. Weirick returns her sincere thanks to the friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted and contributed to the comfort of her little son during his last illness.

The circuit court jury yesterday gave a verdict for the defendant in the case of Willey vs. Barva. To-day the case of John L. Spencer vs. A. J. Taylor is being heard.

J. B. Mitchell, superintendent of bridges and buildings on the Wabash road, was in the city to-day, looking for bids for the erection of a grain elevator at Huntington.

There was an alarm of fire last evening. Some fellows saw the reflection of a coal stove at No. 29 Clinton street and cried "fire!" The department responded and put out the informants.

Judge O'Rourke to-day dismissed the case of Ferdinand Koerdt vs. Michael Steinbacher. He gave judgment to J. A. Fay & Co. vs. C. L. Olds et al for $138.09. The petition to declare Ben B. Evans of unsound mind was dismissed.

John Knapp, long connected with the telegraph service on the Wabash, died at Peru yesterday. Mr. Knapp was train dispatcher when the Wabash offices were in Fort Wayne. His brother is agent at Huntington, and the deceased has many friends to mourn his untimely death.

S. H. Taylor, of Washington, Ind., is in the city. Mr. Taylor is the bank examiner and drops in rather unexpectedly to see that the finances in the Fort Wayne institutions are all square. He found them correct to a penny to-day and will certify to the reliability of Fort Wayne banks.

City Civil Engineer Goshorn is considering the feasibility of building a tunnel under the railroad tracks at Lafayette street. The council committee turned the matter over to him, and if the railroad companies stand a reasonable assessment the much needed improvement will be made.

Sam R. Millur, the drill master of the "Naiad Queen," is entitled to much credit for his work and is personally a nice fellow. He has drilled the school boys to perfection, and their maneuvers excel anything ever seen here. It is a superb piece of work, and all agree that he has attained perfection in this line. The young men have been drilling but a week.

THE NAIAD QUEEN.

The First Presentation of the Operetta—A Marked Success.

The Temple held a delighted if not a large audience last night and the prettiest show of the season was witnessed. The plot of the opera is simply a thread upon which to hang beautiful gems of song, magnificent costumes and paradisaical scenery. The airs are numberless and embrace the sweetest of those pertaining to popular songs. The costumes are dazzling, bright and attractive. It is impossible to give an idea of the superbly beautiful scenery. It must be seen to be appreciated. The water scene in the fourth act, representing a great river during a terrible storm, is without doubt the most realistic scene ever portrayed upon any stage. During the act goddesses are seen sailing through the heavens, beggars transformed into fairies and beauty and wealth into hideousness and poverty. "Liberty and Faith Triumphant" is the crowning feature of the opera. It represents the "Goddess of Liberty" and the "Goddess of Faith" descending from Heaven in a chariot; "Stalacta," "Astraea" and "Clementia," the immortal queens, floating through the blue ether. Beneath them are myriads of naiads, fairies, sprites and dryads, upon whom descend waves of gold, the charming picture culminating amid a burst of vari-colored lights of almost blinding brightness and brilliancy. The entertainment will be well deserving of popular support, and it is expected the Temple will be filled nightly with large and appreciative audiences.

There are some 450 people on the stage. Miss Helen Jeffers, of Terre Haute, sang the leading role. She has a pleasing voice and is known as the Jeuney Lind, of Indiana. Miss Sadie Churchill and Miss Stella Lawrence divided the honors with her. Mr. Yarnelle sang with his customary fervor, but one cannot particularize when all the young masters and misses did so nicely and the best is to credit all with success and give the program below:

The Coming County Convention.

The democratic county central committee will convene here next Tuesday at 1 o'clock p. m. One of its most important functions is to fix the date of the next county convention. This is of the utmost importance to the people, who by an overwhelming majority have always supported the democratic ticket. This year the canvass will be mild, inasmuch as the choice of a president or even a governor are not involved. People cannot be held at fever heat in a county or a partial state campaign for four or five months, neither are they in a temper to have their business in the city and their peaceful pursuits in the county disturbed and demoralized by a long campaign. Some one remarks, "but the campaign does not open for two months or a month before the election." Then, in the name of common sense, why put up candidates five months ahead of time as targets for a vicious republican press who has all to gain and nothing to lose in their warfare on the successful party. Let the campaign be late, then every man can take off his coat and push onward to success with such vigor and animation as to defy the attacks of unscrupulous republican partisans.

The democratic state convention will be late, and October elections have been changed to November, a month later, so that every sensible, unselfish view of the situation points to late in August or early in September as an honest, proper time for the county convention. Then the state platform will be known and men will have issues to engage their attention instead of local or personal bickerings.

Funeral of Lawrence Waits.

The funeral of Waits, the eleven year old son of Rev. J. K. Waits, which occurred Sunday afternoon at the Berry street Methodist church, was largely attended. The interior of the church was handsomely decorated by the children of the Sunday school. Long before the hour announced for the services the spacious church was crowded, and a great many persons were obliged to stand up. The funeral was preached by Rev. Charles W. Lynch, presiding elder of the Northern Indiana conference, assisted by Rev. Mr. Browne, of the Wayne street Methodist church, and Rev. Dr. Meredith, formerly presiding elder of the district.

"Mrs. Johnson, of Fort Wayne, has purchased the Deam farm on the north side of the Wabash river, and has taken possession of the property," says the Bluffton Times.

Both my wife and boy were troubled with rheumatism. The boy's limbs were very much swollen and he suffered intense pain. They are now well and have since been using Athlophoros. J. F. Rabbe, 256 Main street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

St. Louis, March 23.—No one ventures the prediction as to how or when the strike upon the Gould southwest system will end. At last reports the strikers have called on the merchants of this city to assist in bringing about an arbitration.

FAILED TO GO OUT.

SEBASTIA, Mo., March 23.—A train was started out yesterday afternoon. The engineer, fireman and brakemen each received a note before starting, requesting them for the sake of humanity not to go out. When they had gone a short distance a torpedo exploded under the engine. Soon after the train stopped and was backed into the yards. The man who gave the note to the trainmen was arrested.

ONE TRAIN OUT.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 23.—A stock train of twenty-eight cars came in over the Atchison and Topeka road this morning. The stock was unloaded without molestation.

A TRAIN STOPPED.

St. Louis, Mo., March 23.—This morning the Missouri Pacific railroad officials attempted to start a freight train, but, as usual, without success. The train was uncoupled, the switches thrown and a large force of police and private detec-

arrests made.

unsatisfactorily to the strikers.

A NEW ORDER.

BOSTON, March 23.—A new secret order resembling the Knights of Labor, to be called the Knights of Industry, is in the course of formation. The order will embrace hand and brain workers.
Strikes will be discouraged and arbitration advocated.

KILLED ENGINES.

PALESTINE, Tex., March 23.—The striking Knights of Labor invaded the Texas and Pacific railroad yards this morning and disabled two passenger engines.

REJECTED.

The Knights of Labor at St. Louis flatly refused to accept the offer made by H. M. Hoxie for the Missouri Pacific road. The union switchmen in every yard in Kansas City quit work at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, although an advance in wages was recently granted them.

LABOR NOTES.

In the first annual report of the bureau of labor, Commissioner Wright says that last year 1,600,000 men on the average were idle in this country. He thinks the effects of the depression are wearing away, and all the indications are that prosperity is slowly and gradually, but safely returning.

The Knights of Labor of Galveston having failed heretofore in their efforts to secure the assistance of merchants there in boycotting the Mulloy line have now turned their attention to boycotting the merchants throughout Texas.

A STORY OF SUCCESS.

Life and Fortunes of Potter Palmer, Proprietor of the Famous Palmer House

(Special Correspondence.)

CHICAGO, March 23.—Probably not one in a thousand of the multitude of travelers who enter the great portals of Chicago's greatest hotel is able to recognize the elderly, but erect and active, man who occasionally hurries by —a busy man, with his hands full of papers, a high hat, some too new or glossy, worn well back upon his head, clothes severely plain, small but kindly eyes, and a pinched mouth whose hard lines are ever ready to break into a smile of good nature. This man is Potter Palmer, builder and landlord of the hotel which is by many pronounced the greatest in the world. The story of his life is a story of success—of two successes, in fact—of a great fortune twice won. Like most of the self-made men of Chicago, Potter Palmer was in youth a farmer's boy. He was born nearly sixty years ago in Albany county, N.
Y. His parents were Quakers, and
the lad was raised
in habits of frugality and industry. At 18 he became clerk in the store of Platt Adams, which stood in the village of Durham, Greene county, within the shadow of the Cats-kills. Shortly afterward he started a dry goods store of his own at Oneida, and a year later removed to Lockport. He was successful from the beginning, and though Lockport was a thriving town, the young Quaker soon found his ambition superior to his opportunity. He cast about for a more promising location, and while upon a prospecting tour spent one day in Chicago. This was then a struggling town of 40,000 people, but the keen eyes of the dry goods merchant perceived the signs of coming greatness, and that one day decided him. He at once sold his store in Lockport and came to Chicago with a capital of less than $8,000. That was in 1852, and the first year his sales were $78,000. He was almost an ideal merchant of the old school; was first to arrive at his store in the morning, the last to leave at night, careful of his credit and that of his customers, watchful of the pennies and pennies to the ladies. With all of his Quaker prudences he was bold when boldness was required, and this quality of courageous action, following the revolve horn of keen perception, was ultimately found to be the secret of his great success. The war was his opportunity, and he was not slow in improving it. He believed that values were soon to become greatly inflated, and, risking his fortune upon the correctness of his judgment, he filled all the warehouses he could rent with cotton and woolen goods, purchased immediately after Sumter was fired upon. His courage was amply rewarded. In four years he made $2,500,000, and when, in 1855, he concluded to retire from business, he held more than $2,300,000 in government bonds.
Satisfied with what he had, he abandoned his position as the merchant prince of interior America. In thirteen years the sales of his house, now wholesale as well as retail, had grown from $78,000 to $7,000,000 a year, making it the largest dry goods establishment, with two exceptions, on this continent.

A bachelor of 40, the possessor of good health and $3,000,000 or $4,000,000, Mr. Palmer retired to what he hoped would be a life of ease. At Saratoga he soon acquired reputation as a dashing man of the world. No amount was finer than his, no man more liberal with money than he, no drier more dispense than the Quaker dry goods prince from the wild west. During one gay season he was the lion of the Springs, and as his wife said innumerable feminine caps. Quaker stories are told of those holiday pranks of late dinners, of dashing rides behind four-in-hands, accompanied by one or more beauties of the hour, of revivals of champagne and gold gallop. Doubtless some of them have come down to us by evolution "out of a mere proprietor's gorm of truth; but, be that as it may,
Chicago society was startled when it heard, in 1870, that the belle of the town, the daughter of a then most prominent and wealthy citizen, H. H. Hoxie, was to wed the blind Potter Palmer. With all his millions, "they"
of society declared the high-priced beauty was "throwing herself away" in marrying a man twice her age. "They," however, were for once mistaken, for no more happy and devoted and apparently well-mated couple can be found in Chicago to this day.

But Palmer did not devote himself entirely to pleasure. At the close of the war Chicago had no retail street of pretensions. State street, save two blocks, was a narrow lane, between rows of shanties. Single hunked and alone, Potter Palmer set out to make this alley the principal thoroughfare of the growing city. He moved with characteristic boldness. In less than six months he bought three quarters of a mile of frontage, he bought old buildings, moved them back so as to make the street 100 feet wide, or built new ones on the new line. He covered some property holders and frightened others; and at last, after four years of work and expenditure, he succeeded in having State street made 100 feet wide. Almost as if by magic the new street became metropolitan in appearance.
Palmer himself erected a dozen fine buildings, including the first Palmer house, and a store building whose marble front alone cost more than $100,000, and which was, upon its completion, the finest building in the world devoted to trade. In October, 1871, the new Palmer house was begun, and State street was then, what it is still, the most beautiful thoroughfare of Chicago.

To Potter Palmer the great fire came as a crushing calamity. Ninety-five of his buildings were destroyed. A rent roll of $122,000 a year was reduced to nothing. His total loss of income was $230,000, and the income remaining was not sufficient by $15,000 to pay the taxes alone. The prospect was so dreary that for a day Palmer hesitated. Only a year married, and about beginning a series of travels, his dreams of ease and bliss were thus suddenly dispelled. He was tempted to withdraw the remainder of his fortune and leave to others the work of rebuilding the city. While thus hesitating he went to his wife, whose sister is Mrs. Fred Grant. To her he described his perplexity. "What," he asked, "shall we do?"

"Mr. Palmer," replied the wife, "it is the duty of every Chicagoan to stay here and devote his fortune and his energies to rebuilding this stricken city."

This decision gave to Chicago her palace hotel and a score of palatial business blocks.
From that moment Potter Palmer's energies were devoted to the work of reconstruction.
Upon the ruins of a dozen buildings, an army of workmen were soon busy clearing away rubbish. Train loads of building material came rushing in to his order. Foundations were renewed or rebuilt. For the first time in this country artificial lights were used that work on the new Palmer house might go on by night as well as by day. Building after building rose from the ashes. No man contributed so much to the resurrection and new life of Chicago as Potter Palmer.

But his whole fortune was risked upon the outcome. It is only a secret that at one time it was a question if he could escape at least temporary insolvency. He had little or no income. His fortune was invested in real estate. Insurance returns were meager, taxes enormous. His building operations required immense outlays. The Palmer house alone swallowed $3,500,000 in its building and furnishing before it was opened to guests.
But he never faltered. Some real estate was sold, other mortgaged. Rates of interest were high, and following all, came the panic of 1873. Yet he pulled through, and soon found that his very boldness had saved much of his fortune. For whereas a more timid man would have kept nearer the shore in the storm and sold more realty, Palmer held to as much as possible and subsequently profited by the amazing increase in the value of Chicago business property. Potter Palmer is to-day a very wealthy man, and his real roll is the largest in the city. It fills twenty pages, and much of it represents stores and other business buildings in the heart of the city. Thus, notwithstanding that the real estate which he was compelled to sacrifice during his extremity is now worth $1,000,000 more than he received for it, Potter Palmer has expended more money in buildings than any other Chicagoan. Four and a half million dollars represent his investments in this direction in this city. These, as well as the other figures given in this letter, may be relied upon, as I have them from Mr.
Palmer's own lips.

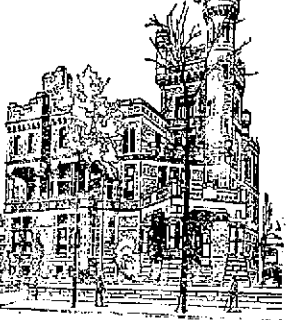

That Potter Palmer's life story is one of success may be gathered from the foregoing, as well as from the fact that the Quaker dry goods dealer has been a successful hotel keeper. The Palmer house was built by rent, but so great was his need for income upon its completion that he determined to manage it himself. For twelve years he has devoted to the management of this house almost daily attention. Nothing escapes his eye.
He is thoroughly familiar with all the details of its innumerable departments, keeping almost as close watch upon the vast canvas-sary, with its 850 rooms and 600 employees, as the most zealous country landlord is able to give his humble inn. His hobby is repairs.
Every day, and at most hours of every day,
he may be found giving directions to mechanics—plumbers, carpenters, decorators, painters—never trusting such work to subordinate hands. His weak point is inability to remember faces. About two years ago he discharged his engineer for incompetency, after finding something amiss in the engine room. A few hours afterward a neatly dressed man accosted him:

"Hear you want to hire an engineer?"

"Yes. Have you got good recommendations?"

The man had, and he was hired at a salary of $10 a month more than the old engineer was paid. He proved a good man, too, and for several days everything went along nicely. Then Palmer made a strange discovery. The new engineer was the old one, whom the landlord had not recognized in his "store clothes." The man is still in charge of the engine, and at the advanced salary, too.

Potter Palmer lives in the finest house in Chicago. It is a castle, and stands on the shore of Lake Michigan, near Lincoln park.

In some respects it is the finest residence in America. The great gothic tower suggests a castle of England. The hall is baronial, with carved oak staircases and furnishings. Slender gothic pillars support the gallery, for the hall's vaulted roof extends the height of the house, and draped across these pillars are the most perfect examples of Gobel tapestries, rich and rare. The floor is composed of a most wonderful piece of mosaic in marble.
An Indian rug of unique pattern, bear skin rugs, and the skin of an enormous Bengal tiger, add warmth of color to the scene. A grand old oak table carved in Italy centuries ago, Dower's "Maiden," suits of armor, other statues and a host of the owner of the house are interesting objects in this apartment.

The whole house is in keeping with the superb taste. Spanish artists have decorated the grand hall, where the bookcases are of carved oak, and where life-sized figures have been made by the same master who fashioned the famous carvings in Antwerp cathedral, may be found upon the mantel.
There is an Indian room, unique and dramatically original, a Moorish room fitting Trevin's description of the Alhambra, a Japanese boarder, a piano made to order of maple, mahogany tables, a Dutch bedroom, another of colonial furnishings, a great conservatory, Moorish lamps—everything rich and artistic which good taste could desire or money procure. The mistress of this palace is still young and beautiful, popular in society, devoted to her Quaker husband, and, as may be imagined, as happy as the day is long.

HOW CONGRESS STANDS.

The Edmunds Bill Likely to Come to a Head.

By Telegram to THE SENTINEL.
WASHINGTON, March 23.—The Edmunds resolutions are likely to be brought to a final vote in the senate the present week. The pending question is on the Van Wyck amendment to consider the nominations to which the resolutions relate in open session. It is possible, however, that the amendment may be withdrawn, the course having been suggested by senators who are heartily in favor of the principle it embodies but do not think it best to now mix the matter with the issues raised by the resolution or dispose of it as a party question.
An effort will be made, and will probably succeed, to get up the Washington territory bill as soon as the pending resolutions are out of the way. The unfinished business of yesterday's morning hour was Logan's bill to increase the efficiency of the army to 80,000 enlisted men.
Logan and Hale had a sharp talk on this measure and it went over to give room to the Edmunds bill discussion by Mr.
Colquitt.

Senator Frye hopes to find an opportunity during the week to begin the discussion of his resolution adverse to the creation of a fishery commission, and Senator Wilson will look for a chance to pass the Des Moines Settler's relief bill over the president's veto.

In the house yesterday the bill to grant a $2,000 pension to the widow of General Hancock, was passed. The Indian appropriation bill, which was extensively discussed last week, is likely to be passed to-day or to-morrow. The postoffice appropriation bill will then have the right of way, and it is expected to run through the week. It is understood that the consideration of this measure will be enlivened by a political debate concerning the postmaster general's policy in regard to last year's appropriations for carrying the ocean mails. The business for the morning hour this week will come from the committee on war claims, district of Columbia, civil service reform and American shipping, naval affairs, or so many of them as may be reached under the calls. The measures of general interest that may thus be brought up for action are the bill relating to pilloage and the bill to increase the navy. Saturday will be devoted to a continuation of the silver discussion.

GENERAL AND PERSONAL.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The belief is entertained that few, if any, renovations will be made in the postal service until after congress adjourns, when republicans will be needed out rapidly.

The Trumbull International Telephone company announces that they will, immediately upon the abandonment of Indiana by the Bell Telephone company, enter upon the field and give even a better service for $3 per month.

Senator Voorhees, who has been very ill for two or three days with neuralgia of the brain, is better.

A telegram was received at the war department this morning from General Crook saying that he would start to-day from Fort Bowie to San Bernardino to receive the surrender of Garmiso and his followers.

PROCEEDINGS TO-DAY.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—The chair laid before the senate a number of house bills, among them was a bill granting a pension of $2,000 a year to the widow of General Hancock. On motion of Blair, that bill was at once passed, Blair stating it had been this morning considered by the pension committee of the senate.

Mr. Beck withdrew the motion heretofore made by him to reconsider the vote by which the senate agreed to the house
